NOTES

USSR - Arms Control: The prompt Soviet response to the latest US proposal indicates that Moscow is anxious to come to agreement on a draft seabeds treaty with the US before negotiations are complicated by proposals from other Geneva conferees. In an approach that the US delegation judges to be sincere and authoritative, the Soviet cochairman has taken exception to only a few points in the new US draft. The most important objection is the basic one that the US text would prevent Moscow from claiming "historic seas" as internal waters. The Soviets are eager to have a draft completed in time for presentation to the current UN General Assembly session, as are the other conferees.
